zip) I do not know how it may have happened. That is, the original image of HP jet printer driver, generated using the license data, object key, and the ralink rt5370 driver, panini vision x check scanner driver, Ralink is available on the CD that is part of the printer driver package in the original version of HP drivers, and it is said that you can use the new driver, but it is not the problem. I would like to give you the CD that is part of the driver package, but I do not have the permission. Any help will be greatly appreciated. Edit : SOLUTION : I solved the problem using the driver of the official web page of Ralink (not the driver of the CD of Sap r3) and the manual of the driver. A: I think you have to insert the object key of the HP jet printer driver. The rt5370 driver has an object key, so it must be inserted to make a connection. The driver is not needed in this case. From the Ralink website: Object key is a software key that is embedded in the driver and loaded in the device driver before it starts. The object key is the media object key, which is unique to the device driver and can be used to uniquely identify the device driver. Use the rt5370 object key generator, The object key generated by the above-mentioned software key is used for the connection to the rt5370 driver. The original rt5370 driver is available on the official web page of Ralink: Enzym 82157476af
